The present church is a Grade 1 listed building which was built in the late 12th Century, stands in a commanding position by the sea on the Headland at Hartlepool.

Our works involved the reconstruction and lowering of the nave floor, the removal and environmental clan of asbestos, the installation of new underground heating, which included removing and reinstatement of the pews & historic stone paving, forming of floor ducts, etc. The works were completed to the satisfaction of the church and under the watching brief of an archaeologist.
